

Education

The Toulouse drawing bursary weekend is on hold and the option of deferring until next spring looks to be the best option subject to further discussion with the French, who are organising it. I suggest that once we know a date, we canvass the successful candidates from this year to see if they still wish to participate. If there are places unfilled we could either approach the unsuccessful candidates from this year or re-advertise for the number of places we have available.

As previously agreed, the UK study bursary has not been advertised this year. Hanna Watkins and the two funded French bursars should be in a position to present at the next congress in 2021. The French section have also awarded their own bursary and the recipient may also be ready to present by then - which may be too many?

Website

I have been talking to Elaine following the discovery of the hack. Unfortunately, the link from the Google search had been hacked although the direct address link seemed to still be working for me. Elaine has reset the links and updated the password and all is now working properly. She has reported back that without spending considerable time and changing the way the site is hosted it is difficult to completely eliminate the problem. It therefore seems best to leave the hosting as it is for the moment, I will endeavour to check the operation of the Google Link occasionally to monitor if there's a problem.

Do we want to do something on the website for the centenary next year? If we are going to use the event to promote the Union we may receive more website visits.